3.1 Synthetic Narratives

A synthetic narrative is constructed as follows. First, compile a large corpus, D , of timelines, encyclopedia entries, journal articles, news reports, websites, and government documents. Next, segment into sentences, $s \in S$, clean, filter, and break into simpler concise sentences, $s^* \in S^$, using a large natural language model, BART (Lewis et al. 2019), fine-tuned on summarization tasks, distilbart-cnn-12-6 (Shleifer and Rush 2020). Then, calculate semantic similarity between each S^ by embedding them with a different large language model, MPNet (Song et al., n.d.), fine tuned to identify paraphrasing (Reimers and Gurevych 2019, 2020). Next, constructed an undirected weighted graph of pair above 95th percentile cosine similarity and hierarchically cluster them into potential events $e^* \in E^$ (Clauset, Newman, and Moore 2004). The resulting set of E^ are small enough to check by hand, summarize, and place in chronological order. The relevant formulas and algorithm are shown below.

Cosine Similarity

$$\text{cosine similarity} = \frac{a \cdot b}{\|a\| \|b\|} \quad (1)$$

Adjacency Matrix

$$A_{vw} = \begin{cases} 1 & \text{if vertices v and w are connected} \\ 0 & \text{otherwise} \end{cases} \quad (2)$$

Identity Function

$$\delta(i, j) = \begin{cases} 1 & \text{if } i=j \\ 0 & \text{otherwise} \end{cases} \quad (3)$$

Degree of a vertex

$$k_v = \sum_w A_{vw} \quad (4)$$

Modularity - Is the difference between observed within-community edges and average expected edges on a random graph

$$Q = \frac{1}{2m} \sum_{vw} [A_{vw} - \frac{k_v k_w}{2m}] \delta(C_w, C_w) \quad (5)$$
